This presentation:

deals with an unexplored area of applied linguistics, that of cross-language mediation

- discusses the usefulness of the research outcomes
- presents its implications for (multilingual) testing, curricular planning, syllabus design and teaching

3rd Postgraduate Student Conference
Athens, December 2011

PRESENTATION TITLE: “What mediators are expected to do with the language: analyzing written mediation tasks”

'Mediation' between languages.... .....an unexplored area

Mediating activities and strategies [...] No illustrative scales are yet available. (CEFR, 2001: 88)

"[The CEFR] provides validated, scientifically calibrated descriptors of [the] different aspects of its descriptive scheme, except for intercultural competences and mediation. (North, 2011:6)

What users complain about in relation to the CEFR descriptors are [...]: The absence of descriptors for socio-cultural aspects and reading literature (both tried) and for mediation (not attempted). (North, 2007:657)

RESEARCH AIM

- to acquire an understanding of the mechanisms of cross-language mediation in a testing context
- to investigate what strategies lead to successful mediation performance

THE MOST SIGNIFICANT IMPLICATION

a starting point for the development of can-do statements relevant to mediation – already absent from the CEFR

The last words (before the viva)...

Chapter 7

“Empirically validated descriptors for different levels of language proficiency are definitely in demand in order to supplement the rather vague CEFR descriptors or the language proficiency descriptors of various language testing systems and curricula. [...] It is exactly this void that this work is intended to fill, given the lack of objective criteria to describe mediation skills and strategies in the CEFR.”

From the last words ...to a brave new world!

From the last words ...to a brave new world!

The 'new' CEFR...

- Mediation = top priority
- Descriptors for mediation will be included in the new list of CEFR descriptors (2015)

Motivation for the research

Contemporary multilingual contexts:

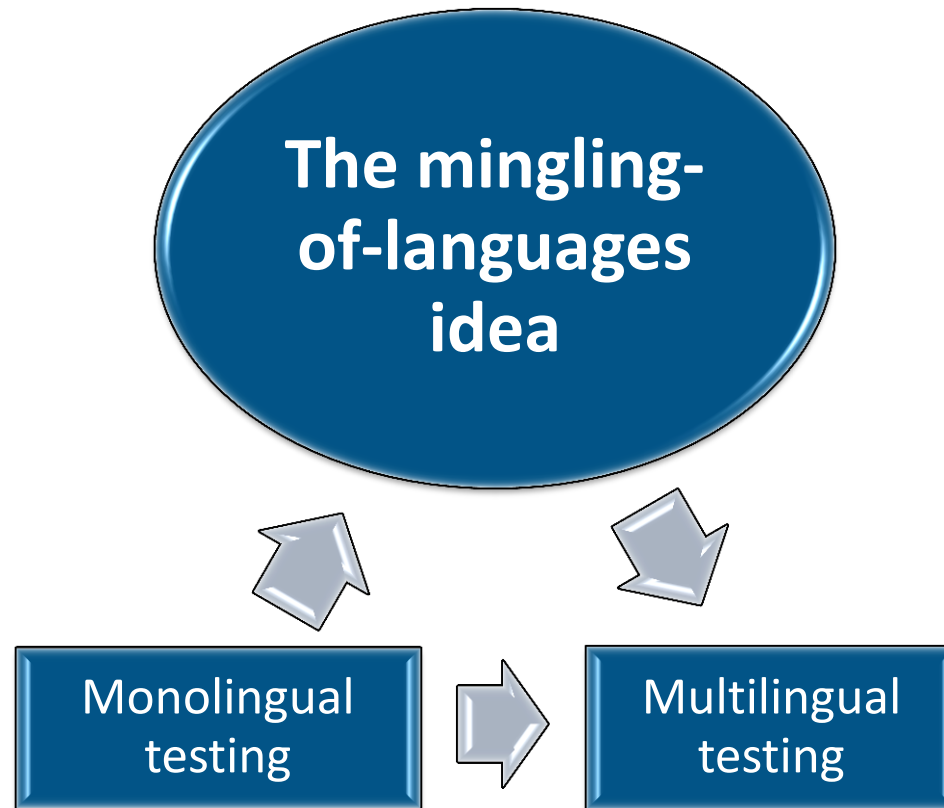

- Unavoidable mixing/ fusion of languages
  - Speakers are continuously called upon to act as interlingual mediators
- ▶ what skills and strategies somebody needs to be able to mediate effectively in these contexts?

What does the process of mediation involve?

- extraction of information from a source text in one language and relaying it in another language for a given communicative purpose
- interpretation of meanings articulated in source texts & making of new meanings in the target language expressed appropriately for the context of situation (Dendrinos, 2006)

a form of translanguaging

Imagine that you work for the Greek Tourist Organization. Your department has received a request from the tourist organization of another country for information about the very successful 'Blue Flag' programme. You have been asked to write a report (180-200 words) explaining how Greece has managed to achieve Blue Flag status for many of its beaches. Use information from the website below to write your report.

Quantitative & qualitative analysis

- To what extent do task parameters and requirements affect written mediation-strategy use?
- Which strategies (and to what extent) differentiate successful from less successful mediation scripts?
- Which strategies (and to what extent) differentiate scripts of different proficiency levels?

- To what extent does the linguistic realisation of mediation strategies in low level mediation scripts differ from the linguistic realisation of the strategies traced in high level scripts?

CONTRIBUTION & USEFULNESS OF THE STUDY

Implications for curricular planning & syllabus design

Towards the development of descriptors at a European level

- The study constitutes a starting point for the development of descriptors and the creation of standardized measures for reliable assessment of mediation competence
  - ◆ mediation strategies needed for learners of different levels when being involved in mediation tasks

Why is it so important to have can-do statements for mediation?

- They will inform the development of language courses, test materials, syllabi and language studies curricula aiming at the development of learners' mediation skills and multilingual competence

Towards the development of descriptors: Usefulness of the study in the Greek context

Certain results have already been creatively exploited for the grading of illustrative descriptors relevant to mediation in the new Greek Curriculum for Foreign Languages, which among other things, demonstrates what learners of different levels are expected to do when mediating

(<http://rcel.enl.uoa.gr/xenesglosses/>)

Implications for curricular planning & syllabus design

- This thesis has stressed the importance of the implementation of programmes which will include mediation activities as a means for engaging students in languaging practices which involve interplay of languages (a multilingual approach to language learning)

Learners will make sense of the multilingual linguistic landscape they live in (Gorter, 2006)

- ▷ linguistic diversity will be promoted
- ▷ polyphony will be appreciated

CONTRIBUTION & USEFULNESS OF THE STUDY

Implications for teaching & testing

Implications for teaching

- Language teachers who wish to develop their students' mediation strategies can benefit from the outcomes of this research

Information about:

- a) the types of tasks that can be used when teaching students of different proficiency levels and
- b) what strategies will help students the necessary skills to move with ease from one language to another

Implications for testing

- insights to the KPG test development teams and generally test developers who wish to assess mediation ability
